Bradford takes you camping Normandy Farms is just up the street!

Travelers have long been drawn to the New England area. Boasting four distinct and wonderful seasons, as well as an historical significance for the entire country, this northeast corner offers perhaps the widest range of attractions to vacationers than any other destination. Because of this, it is no wonder that recreational vehicle enthusiasts frequently include this locale in their travel itinerary whether it be for a weekend or a season. Getting the most out of a travel experience is the number one priority for most vacationers. Setting up camp in a location that will allow this is the number one priority for most RVer's. Nestled amid 125 acres of pines and rolling grass-carpeted hills and fields of Foxboro, Massachusetts, the Daniels Family and their full time, friendly and knowledgeable staff host hundreds of RVer's, many who are return visitors, who have found this destination to be most advantageous. With offerings as diverse as the campers it hosts, a stay at Normandy Farms offers each traveler the opportunity to come away with the vacation experience they were seeking. Foxboro and its centralized location and highway access provides a perfect "hub" for those wishing to explore the New England region. Although a "stone's throw" from Foxboro Stadium - home of the New England Patriots NFL team, Normandy Farms is a mere 30 miles from both Boston and Providence, Rhode Island. History buffs can walk in the tracks of our forefathers in each of these historical cities while the cities' urban attractions will satisfy even your most contemporary travel companions. Within 45 miles of the resort, travelers can discover their preserved histories in towns such as Concord, New Hampshire or Lexington, MA. Also, a short jaunt to the east will put you at the site of Plymouth, MA where a replica of the Mayflower remains in port. Travel 75 miles from your camp at Normandy Farm and you will mix and mingle with the Newport, RI crowd. Known for its mansions, sailing, shopping, beaches, and aristocrats, Newport's proximity to your site is a "must see" while your in town. As you plan your travels, keep in mind that Normandy Farms is only 310 miles from Bar Harbor, ME, 200 miles from New York City, 290 miles from Philadelphia, PA, and 425 miles from Washington, DC. Whether you're just passing through or planning to be here awhile, Normandy Farms is on your way to wherever you're going, but don't be surprised if you find yourself spending some of the time relaxing right there on site! With its past record of being the "RV Park of the Year," Normandy Farms Family Camping Resort prides itself on exceptional atmosphere and activities that you would expect from a resort community. With cleanliness being a priority, the care taken by the proprietors is evident from the restrooms to the sparkling clear swimming pools tempting you to dive right in. As a family campground, the Daniels family have put together an extensive range of activities
