FOXBORO — If you have an RV and like to camp, USA Today has a recommendation for you — and you won't have to travel far.

Normandy Farms has been ranked the top recreational vehicle campground in America, the national news organization says in its 2025 10 Best Readers' Choice Awards.

"This New England camping location has been in business since 1971," USA Today says. "In addition to great RV sites, the resort also features four swimming pools, a jacuzzi and sauna, a fitness center, and a disc golf course. You'll also find bocce, pickleball, a fishing pond, and tennis courts here, and there are golf carts you can rent to get around this fantastic property with ease."

The RV campgrounds on the list "boast top-notch amenities, beautiful scenery, and proximity to some of the nation's most captivating destinations," USA Today wrote.

Normandy Farms celebrated on social media, writing on Facebook that its team is "beyond excited" about being named the best.

"Thank you to our incredible guests, dedicated team, and everyone who voted for us!" wrote campground officials.

The Daniels family bought the land in 1759 and has worked it for 10 generations.

The property began as a working farm with dairy, poultry, and sheep and was transformed into a campground 54 years ago by Albert Daniels. Today, Normandy Farms employs about 140 workers and has more than 400 campsites, including deluxe cabins, yurts, and safari tents on about 100 wooded acres.

Over the years, Normandy Farms has been recognized for being a leader in the RV industry. It won the RV Park of the Year award four times from the Association of RV Parks and Campgrounds, and was recognized by the Travel Channel as One of the Top Campgrounds in the World and by Yankee magazine as Best Luxury RV Park.
